The first official day of summer is June 21st! I'm sure you've got a lot planned--vacations, sports, friends and sleep--but what happens when the boredom sets in? Instead of heading to the movie theater to watch the latest blockbuster, why don't you keep yourself busy by volunteering at a Bay Area film or performance-based nonprofit? It will keep your mind and body active and allow you to expand your horizons and get your creative juices flowing!

Not only will you make a great contribution to the community, but you can make great connections to build up your resume all summer long and discover new interests! There are lots of performances, events and screenings that are always looking for help! Keep reading to hear about a few.

STERN GROVE FESTIVAL – IN CONCERT WITH NATURE

The Stern Grove Festival Association showcases the performing arts all summer long! From R&B to ballet, Stern Grove is dedicated to providing admission-free events for the Bay Area community. They are putting on ten Sunday events for their 72nd season and would love to have the help and energy of youth volunteers!

Do you like working with and helping people? Volunteers are needed as ushers, information booth staffers, donation collectors, hospitality personnel and bike valets. If you're excited about working with young children, Stern Grove has an expanded education and outreach program called Kids Days which needs youth volunteers for event facilitation and pre-concert event set-up.

After your volunteer shift, you will be invited to enjoy reserved seating during the performance and complimentary beverages and snacks. Your help will be much appreciated! Jessica Zeidman, the Volunteer Coordinator, tells us, "Youth are a vital component of our volunteer program at the Stern Grove Festival. They have the stamina, energy and determination to assist us with our 10,000 patrons each Sunday. The Festival would not be possible without our dedicated youth volunteers."

Performances are on weekends and weekdays, so why don't you check out Romeo and Juliet in the beautiful Bruns Memorial Amphitheater and help serve the community at the same time! Volunteer ushers are needed to distribute programs, help with seating, assist with will call ticketing and general site upkeep. When seats are available, ushers are invited to relax and enjoy the performance.
